Oct 17, 2012	Project web email	[REDACTED]	Hi, I was just wondering what energy source the plant will be using to operate? Will it be self sustaining or using an external source of energy? Thanks	N	Good morning,  Thank-you for your interest in our facility. The facility will require natural gas for starting up and shutting down the facility. While in full operation the facility uses the energy produced from the burning of non-hazardous source separated municipal solid waste (waste after recyclables are removed). The waste is fed a consistent rate into the boiler. The boiler is lined with tubes containing water and the heat from the burning of waste creates a steam. The steam leads to a turbine generator which is then converted into energy and distributed to the power grid. Some of the electricity produced is used to power other components within the facility. So, yes, for the most part it is self sustaining.  I hope you find this information helpful. If you have any other questions please contact us again.  Regards,  Project Team	Oct 22, 2012	LW
